Feeling Runs High in Athens When Forts are Taken.

VENIZELLOS DENOUNCES ACTS

Former Premier Uses Fervid Language to Condemn Invasion; German Officers in Command; Fenton Attacks on Verdun Repulsed; French Clinch

By Associated Press.
PARIS, May 29.—A news dispatch from Athens says that grave trouble has broken out there following the news of the invasion of Macedonia by the Bulgarians.

Bulgarian troops crossed the Greek frontier on May 26 and occupied the Greek forts of Ruti, Gradotia and Spatovo. The Greek troops which had been stationed there withdrew on the advance of the Bulgarians, who claimed permission from the Athens government for their act.

The Bulgarians are said to be led by German officers, who explained to commanders of the Greek forts that the Central Powers were merely being accorded the same privilege that had been given the Entente Allies in permitting them to occupy Saloniki.

It was reported from Athens yesterday that feeling was running very high in the Greek capital over the Bulgarian invasion. The Herald, the organ of M. Venizelos, appeared yesterday with a black border and contained a fiery article from the pen of the former Premier.

GERMANS ARE REPULSED.
PARIS, May 29.—The attacks were made by German troops advancing last night from Corbeaux wood, on the Verdun front. The French war office report of today says these assaults resulted in failure.

East of the Meuse the night was comparatively calm except for heavy artillery actions in the vicinity of Fort Vaux.

Fifteen aerial encounters occurred and two German machines were brought down, one of them falling in flames.

ARTILLERY FIRES ON.
BERLIN, May 29.—Violent artillery duels are continuing on both banks of the Moselle on the Verdun front, this was stated today. The French troops made two weak attacks on Cumieres village taken last week by the Germans but these were easily repulsed.

CAPTURE ITALIAN PORT.
VIENNA, May 29.—Austro-Hungarian troops have captured a fortified position west of Arriero, Italy, the war office announced today.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Two additional names of candidates for the Republican nomination for president today were brought to Chicago today. They were those of Charles Evans Hughes of New York, and T. Coleman du Pont of Delaware.

Frank H. Hitchcock, accompanied by William L. Ward, former Republican national committee man from New York, launched the pre-convention campaign in the interest of Hughes.

When the roll of the states is called for the nominations, it has been arranged to have Alabama vote in favor of New York so that Hughes' name may be the first presented.

CATHOLICS OF DUNBAR TOWNSHIP GRADUATING CLASS IGNORE SERMON

The baccalaureate services for the graduates of the Dunbar Township High School were not attended by the Catholic members of the class, nor other Catholic students. Rev. J. J. Greaney, pastor of St. Vincent de Paul's Roman Catholic Church, announced from the pulpit yesterday morning that in view of the fact that the baccalaureate services were entirely religious and not educational, members of his congregation would find it contrary to the dictates of their conscience to attend.

Despite the fact that approximately one-third of the members of the graduating class are Catholics, that religion was entirely ignored in the baccalaureate program, and not one of the three ministers on the program reside in the township. The invocation was delivered by Rev. W. B. Farnell, pastor of the Dawson Presby-

LARGE QUANTITY OF VILLA ARMS FOUND IN A CAVE

Americans Come Across 10 Machine Guns, 300 Rifles and Much Ammunition.

By Associated Press.
FIELD HEADQUARTERS, NEAR NAMQUITA, May 29.—Ten machine guns, 300 rifles and a quantity of ammunition discovered yesterday in a Villa cache near here was brought to field headquarters today. The arms were found in a cave in Ojo Canyon, to reach which the guides climbed a tortuous mountain trail at night.

Numerous theories have been advanced as to the cache, but military authorities here cling to the belief that it contained a greater quantity of the armament which Villa was reported to have hidden in the Bachimba district before the raid on Columbus, N. M.

American army intelligence officers are centering their efforts on seeking further hiding places of weapons and ammunition, realizing that the clearing of Northern Chihuahua of such caches is vital should Villa or any of his adherents reorganize and attempt to operate in this region.

MEXICAN ENVOY HERE

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Manuel Arredondo, an attaché of the General Carranza's foreign office, arrived here today and conferred with Eliseo Arredondo, the Mexican ambassador, but denied that he brought a note as had been expected or that he brought any instructions from his chief. He declared he was merely in the United States on a vacation.

Mr. Arredondo and other Mexican officials professed to be puzzled. It has been reported from Mexico City and the border that a special messenger was bringing a new communication from General Carranza. No indication of its contents has been given but it generally has been assumed by American officials that the expected note probably renewed the demand for the withdrawal of American forces or made a protest against the second punitive expedition led by Colonel Sibley and Major Langhorne.

MUST MOVE POLES

City Preparing to Have Apple Street Walks Laid.

City Engineer S. M. Foust held a conference with the telephone officials last week relative to the removal of poles on Apple street. Along the south side of the street the poles are placed just where the sidewalks ought to be. Orders were issued to have them removed promptly.

Anticipating the early paving of the Apple street hill, Mayor Marietta today awarded to Contractor John Duncan the job of laying a concrete walk in front of the Perry property. The Connellsville Building Company, it is said, will soon lay a walk along the north side of the street.

JAMES J. HILL,
EMPIRE BUILDER,
DEATH'S VICTIM

Famous Railroad Man Succumbs After Being Unconscious 12 Hours.

DEVELOPED THE NORTHWEST

Famous Great Northern System, Constructed Without Government Aid, United Factor in Development of Biggest States' Finest Wheat Farms.

By Associated Press.
ST. PAUL, Minn., May 29.—James J. Hill, railroad builder, capitalist and most widely known figure of the Northwest, died at his Summit avenue residence at 5:30 this morning as a result of an infection due to bowel trouble.

Mr. Hill was unconscious for nearly 12 hours before he died. Dr. Herman M. Biggs of New York, and Dr. Stanley Seeger of Rochester, Minn., together with members of the immediate Hill family, were at the bedside when the end came.

James J. Hill, known as "the head of the pack of the world" in the Great Northwest, led in its development from a wilderness into what now comprises six wealthy states dotted with 400,000 farms; and he blazed a trail for transportation which reached eventually from Buffalo to Asia, with a total mileage of rail and steamship facilities that would nearly girdle the earth. That but roughly spans the story of his achievement.

As a mere youngster had of 18, he toured from Maine to Minnesota. When, in 1856, he disembarked from a Mississippi river packet at St. Paul, that place was a frontier town of 5,000 inhabitants. At the sign of W. J. Brown & Co., agents for the Duluth & St. Paul & Pacific Coast Company, he found a job as both stevedore and clerk.

In the fifteen years that followed he seized every opportunity to study the whole problem of river transportation. Two years later, with a date-battered steamer he established the first regular communication with St. Paul and the Manitoba ports of the fertile Red River Valley. At about that time St. Paul was having its first experiment in railroad building. Eighty miles had been laid to St. Cloud, 315 miles to Breckenridge, both of which terminals were at the southern end of the Red River Valley, and there were about 100 miles of track "which began nowhere and ended in that same indefinite spot." This venture ran up a debt of $25,000,000 and collapsed.

Hill had had sufficient success in the region to be seized with a consuming desire to purchase the defaulted property. After five years of financial dickering, including the sale of all his other interests, which netted a fortune of $100,000, he and a syndicate of three others—Sir Donald A. Smith, George Stephen and Norman W. Klutton—obtained the object of his desire.

The St. Paul, Minnesota & Manitoba railway was formed to operate the property, with Hill as general manager. When in 1883 Mr. Hill was elected president he undertook "the extension of the road from his Dakota and Minnesota homestead to the Pacific ocean. He was confronted by three great competitors to the south, each of which had received big bonuses as government aid, whereas the "Manitoba" had none. The competitors, as it were, did not have a dollar of government subsidy or an acre of grant to forward its progress from the Minnesota boundary to the sea.

In this light, Hill's plan was widely deemed pure folly, but he pressed it to conclusion by building and populating as he built.

When the line to Puget Sound once laid, he turned Empire Builder. He introduced the livestock industry into the vast areas of bush-grass plains, and developed them by importing blooded stock; he sent demonstration trains through the country with men who showed the people how to raise more wheat to the acre; he made an outlet for the grain by establishing a cheap rate by rail and steamship to Buffalo where he built great elevators; in fact, for upwards of 20 years he left nothing in his power undone to develop the country where he had staked out his claim as the great common carrier.

But at the Pacific theater he was not satisfied for he saw with the Orient still further opportunities. He organized a fleet of Pacific steamships for the commercial invasion of Japan and China.

His faith in the Far East was rewarded as liberally as that in the Northwest. It is estimated that the Pacific fleet now carries nearly 50,000,000 worth of products to the Orient every year.

While Mr. Hill built up for himself and his associates an immense fortune, he also helped to create for the settlers along his lines a wealth of over five billion dollars in real property, which is represented by the value of the 400,000 farms and their 550,000 acres of improved land.

Upon his retirement at 63, the "struck of rust" he had bought 30 years before, had expanded to more than 6,000 miles and it was earning gross profits of more than $100,000,000 a year, and carrying 15,000,000 tons of freight annually. He still retained a hand in the Great Northern's policy as chairman of the board of directors, while his son Louis, who had worked up from the humblest position of his father's railroad, became president.

For several years James J. Hill had been in the habit of insisting both to his friends and the public that he was not actively engaged in business.

Just how active he was during the last two years of his life can be judged only by little evidences of his master hand in questions affecting the Great Northern railroad and the First National Bank of St. Paul and by three outstanding accomplishments in which his will and genius asserted themselves.

From a world viewpoint it would be hard to say whether his staunch support of the Belgian people following the invasion of the Germans or the part played in the negotiations for the $500,000,000 loan to the Allied governments was the more important.

From the time the work of succeeding the Belgians began Mr. Hill took a leading part in the movement. It will probably never be known how much money he sent to King Albert, an old personal friend, and how much he induced others to send.

His place as an international figure was never more prominently displayed than when the representatives of the Allied cause to New York in quest of a huge loan. One of the first men to be sent for by J. P. Morgan was Mr. Hill and his assurance that he and the people of the Northwest were prepared to do their share in taking up the foreign bonds is believed to have contributed largely to the success of the negotiations.

SAFE WORKS TAKEN OVER BY THE C. M. & C. COMPANY

Machines There Are Put Into Use in an Effort to Catch up With Rush of Orders.

The plant of the Pittsburgh Safe Company has been leased by the Connellsville Machine & Car Company and will be operated on part time in an effort by the latter concern to catch up with a rush of orders. For the past several months the Connellsville Machine & Car Company has been working full time, and finding its plant falling behind in deliveries, arranged to lease the old safe works, where several like machines were available.

It is stated that the leasing of the safe works was only temporary, but it is likely to continue as long as the rush of business at the Connellsville Machine & Car Company's plant continues. There is no indication yet of a letup.

PERPETUAL CARE OF GRAVES PLAN
AT HILL GROVE

Endowment Association is Formed to Maintain Family Lots.

FIVE LIFE TRUSTEES NAMED

They Will Disburse Proceeds From Any Funds Left in Their Care to Insure Maintenance of the Lots; Minimum Sum to be Decided Later.

To provide for the perpetual care, maintenance and beautification of lots in Hill Grove cemetery, 11 lot owners have made application for a charter, through Attorney J. Kirk Reppert, for "The Hill Grove Endowment Association," the purpose of which will be to receive bequests and invest the fund in such a way as to provide a permanent income for the cemetery.

The incorporators are Frank R. Bradford, A. B. Hood, J. E. Sims, J. Kirk Reppert, C. T. Norton, J. A. Armstrong, J. M. Grey, Fred Frisbee, John P. Torrence, Joseph T. Johnson and J. C. Munson. The affairs of the association will be managed by five trustees: Joseph T. Johnson, A. B. Hood, E. T. Norton, J. M. Grey and J. A. Armstrong. They will serve for life, but in the event of death or resignation, the surviving trustees will select a successor within 10 days. The only qualification for a trustee is that he must have direct relatives buried in Hill Grove cemetery.

There have been many cases where persons have wished to will money for the perpetual maintenance of their cemetery lots, but have known of no association to which to make the bequest. The endowment association supplies this need. The minimum amount that will be received for the perpetual care of a lot will be fixed later. There will be no maximum.

The idea is to accept enough to provide a fund, which placed on first mortgage will provide enough revenue annually to give the lots the best of care. Eventually all of the lots in Hill Grove cemetery will be sold and the association is looking forward so that the place may be forever kept beautiful when this source of income is gone. The association will have no paid officers and all revenue will go toward the maintenance of the cemetery.

Two sets of markers will be provided, one for lots endowed for perpetual care and another for those to be cared for annually.

"BE PREPARED" IS
DR. HARRIS' ADVICE TO THE GRADUATES

Bucknell President Says There are Many Opportunities at All Times.

PREDICTS A WONDERFUL FUTURE

Says the United States Will Have 200 Million Population in 50 Years and be One of the Three Leading Powers of the World; Service is Interesting.

Commencement Week for the 1916 graduates of the Connellsville high school began last night with the baccalaureate sermon in the Colonial Theatre. The theatre was well-filled with friends and relatives of the graduates when the service began at 8:45 o'clock. The evening service at all of the other churches had been dispensed with and most of the pastors participated in the program at the theatre.

Rev. C. C. Buckner, pastor of the Christian Church and president of the Ministerial Association, presided. Kiefer's orchestra played appropriate selections prior to the opening of the service. Two excellent anthems, "O Lord How Excellent is Thy Name" and "Behold the Days Come," were sung by the United Presbyterian Church choir. The invocation was asked by Rev. C. E. Wagner, pastor of the Trinity Reformed Church; the scripture reading was conducted by Rev. G. L. C. Richardson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the prayer offered by Rev. J. H. Lambertson, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The class sermon was preached by Rev. John Howard Harris, D. D. Ph. D., president of Bucknell University and father of Walter W. Harris, a member of the high school faculty.

Rev. Harris' discourse was one calculated to inspire the graduates seated in front of him in the middle tier of seats, wearing their caps and gowns. Contrary to many commencement speakers, who speak at the notion that the world is waiting for the graduates of schools and colleges, Dr. Harris told his hearers that it is true there are thousands of opportunities waiting for them—in a few years thousands of places of importance will be looking for new people to fill them.

Dr. Harris emphasized the necessity of preparation for these opportunities. "Keep your lamps burning," he urged. The future of the United States, he declared, will be one of such greatness that it behooves the present generation to get ready for it; to be a part of it and assist in its future development. Dr. Harris said that within his life he had seen the population of this country increase four-fold and that 50 years from now, it should have 200 million people. Germany, France, Austria, Italy and other European nations whose territorial bounds are small, he said, will be but second class powers. There will be three great powers, he said, of which the United States will be one.

The importance of higher education was also emphasized by the speaker. He told the graduates not to let the prospect of a good job keep them from completing college courses. There will be better places waiting for them when they are through, he said.

The second event of commencement week will come tomorrow night when the seniors will be banded by the sophomores at Trinity Lutheran Church.

HIGBEE URGES CHRISTIAN WORKERS TO KEEP FAITH

Create Spirit of Civic Responsibility as Solemn Duty, He Declares.

At a meeting of the Men's Christian Workers' League held yesterday afternoon in the Methodist Episcopal Church, Attorney E. C. Higbee spoke on "The Practical Social Need of Connelville." He censured the election officers and registrars who allowed illegal voting and told the league that the only way to put and end to it would be to arouse public sentiment against it.

"The practical social need of Connelville is the same as the practical need of Fayette county," he said. "The greatest evil which the people of Fayette county have suffered is the disregard of the spirit of law."

The one thing above everything we need here is a spirit of civic responsibility and duty. If I get you gentlemen to understand that idea as I see it; if I can get you to believe it as I believe it and can somehow induce you to act upon it, I will have done by far the greatest thing that I have ever accomplished."

Mr. Higbee asked the league to keep going if it once got started towards reform, for "what you once gain, you don't lose," he told them.

After Mr. Higbee's talk, a business session was conducted and the constitution and by-laws were read. It was decided to alert the officers of the league the first Sunday in January of each year.

An emblem was adopted at the meeting which will probably be worn by the members of the league in button form. The emblem has a Bible and cross in the center and the words, "In Hon. Signe Vinces," written on the four sides of it. In outer circle are the words, "Men's Christian Workers' League."

Examine Your TEETH Tonight
—after you clean them.
You will find, in all probability, an accumulation of tartar on the enamel and bits of food deposit hiding between the crevices. YOUR DENTIFRICE does not FULLY CLEAN! Loss of teeth is caused usually by one of two conditions—Pyorrhea or decay, both of which develop, as a rule, only in the mouth where germ-laden tartar is present.
SENRECO, the recently discovered formula of a dental specialist, is two-fold in its action. First, it REALLY CLEANS, embodying specially prepared, soluble granules unusually effective in cleaning away food deposits. Second, it is particularly destructive to the germ of Pyorrhea. ENTITLED TO DAMAGES

Inter-state Commerce Commission Decides in Favor of Pittsburg Steel Co.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has handed down a decision in the case of the Pittsburg Steel Company against the Pittsburg & Lake Erie Railroad Company, in which the steel company claimed an allowance of $2.25 per car for each car of iron ore shipped into its plant from the railroad.

This allowance was known as a "turnout allowance" and it was claimed that it was made to all of the complainant's competitors.

The record shows that during the period during which the railroad suspended paying allowance, from July 29, 1913 to April 1, 1914, 5,359 cars of ore were shipped from the Lake Erie to the Moenness plant of the complainant. The finding of the commission follows:

"Upon the whole record we conclude and find that the failure of the defendant to pay the allowance of $2.25 a car, either to the Pittsburg Steel Company or its industrial railway, when such allowances were paid to the complainant's competitors through their industrial railways, subjected the Pittsburg Steel Company and its industrial railway to unlawful prejudice and disadvantage; that the complainants were thereby damaged to the extent alleged and that they are entitled to recover damages on the basis of $2.25 a car for each carload of iron ore received at the blast furnaces of the Pittsburg Steel Company during the period of the action."

STEEL PASSENGER CARS

Number in Service Was 74,250 in 1915; Enormous Cost of Replacement.

The latest compilation of equipment statistics available shows that at the close of last year 71,278 passenger cars were in service on the railroads of the United States, of which 41,382 were of wood construction, 13,286 all-steel, while 5,609 had steel underframes and wooden bodies.

To replace even the wooden cars yet remaining in use with all-steel could be done outright, would cost upward of $500,000,000.

At the Theatres

SOISSON THEATRE.

"GRAFT"—The popular actress, Jane Novak, appears at the Soisson Theatre today in the last episode of the famous political serial "Graft" in this episode Harding goes after the Gas Trust and after much hard work he succeeds in running them down. Dorothy is his "Final Conquest." "The Capital Price" is a two-reel Imp detective drama featuring Harry Donham and Tina Marshall. This play was directed by Edwin Stevens, who played the detective in the famous Broadway Universal picture "The Man Inside." It deals with a secret service agent, who has a formula of an explosive, which is very much coveted by foreign powers. There is also a pretty love tale in it. "A Strange Confession" is a Victor drama with Kate Russell and Calvin Chase in the leading roles. It is the story of a runaway monkey who gets in a house and robs the safe, which was left open. The son is blamed for the robbery but is later cleared. "Never Lie to Your Wife" is a Nestor comedy, Billie Rhodes and Neal Duran in the cast. It deals with two men who go out every night and leaves their wives at home, saying they are out on business, but they are found out. Tomorrow, Robert Bosworth and Jane Novak in the great drama "The Target." "The Target" is one of the strongest plays that has ever been written on the old but ever new subject of the unchanging love of a mother for her son. The theme is as fresh as if it had never been handled by an author of playwright.

GLOBE THEATRE.

"PLAYING WITH FIRE"—Starring Olga Petrova, is featured today at the Globe in "Playing With Fire," sex is the dominant element and throughout the five acts of the popular play and players drama, one of the best things provided, there is a commendable effort to avoid unbecomingly methods of production. It is evidenced in the varied back grounds for sub-titles, designed to harmonize with the spirit of the scene being introduced. It is apparent in odd lighting effects, in the use made of double exposures and in the care taken to give the picture a distinctive form. "Playing With Fire" is the title Arnon Hoffman gave his rather frank, though unobjectionable sex story directed with considerable skill by Francis J. Grandon. Always distinguished in appearance and wearing many stylish gowns, Olga Petrova is an impressive, if not exactly sympathetic figure in the role of a woman who marries an elderly man out of gratitude, and then is wooed away by the impetuous son of the house. It is a picture of a woman's passion, but when it comes to protecting her step-daughter from the young artist she has no difficulty in indicating her sincerity of her purpose. The climax of the story is cleverly worked up. Evelyn Gient introduced as a child and later a young woman, whose first serious love affair is with the philandering artist, is strikingly charming and dramatically unaffected. She gives the picture a valuable touch of innocence. Arthur Hoops as her father and husband of the day provides a performance of nice dignity and forceful. Tomorrow, Mae Murray will be seen in a Paramount drama, "To Have and To Hold."

RECOMMENDS CHAMBERLAIN'S

"I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, having used it in my family for the past thirteen years. I have tried other remedies, but Chamberlain's is the only one that gave me permanent relief. We are never without it even when on a visit or summer outing, and I cannot say too much in praise of it," writes Emerson Demore, Haverhill, N. H. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

THE CONNELL COMPANY,
Publishers.
J. P. SYDOR,
President and Managing Editor.
JAMES L. BLACKLEE,
Secretary and Treasurer.
Advertising and Circulation Manager.
MEMBER OF:
Associated Press,
Audit Bureau of Circulations,
Pennsylvania Associated Dailies.

MONDAY EVENING, MAY 29, 1916.

THE FOURTH CLASS LOBBY.

The Fourth Assistant Postmaster General rose to fame by tagging serious legislation with coarse jokes while a fourth rate member of the Pennsylvania Legislature. He recently sent out a circular to postmasters over the country to the effect that "Congress had surrendered to the railroads" in the matter of mail compensation and urging every postmaster to appoint himself a committee of one to see that the Congressmen and Senators from his district and state were deluged with telegrams from their horrified constituents protesting against this high-handed outrage.

This cheap manner of belittling public sentiment was brought to the attention of the Senate and the Hon. James L. Blacklee was brought before the Committee on Postoffice to explain the impropriety of his conduct. It was pointed out to Untruthful James that his remarks lacked truth as well as courtesy, but being a Sovereign Member of the Administration he did not apologize.

It is plain that the railroads are entitled to more money for carrying the mails because they are carrying so much more mail matter, especially since the parcels post law went into effect. The present action of Congress in increasing the compensation is only a long delayed attempt at justice.

But the Wilson administration has been so slow to raise revenues and so eager to spend them that it cannot afford to be fair to the railroads. It has to be generous to itself, and it can't figure out where the funds are coming from, hence Blacklee's fourth class lobby.

NEWSPAPER PENTS.

"The zeal of thy house hath eaten thee up." The text can with fitness and propriety be applied to the modern newspaper office.

Through a persistence that has sometimes bordered on the offensive, overzealous press agents have attempted to foist all sorts of stuff on the newspaper under the guise of news. Often lacking the essential feature of news, the "stories" presented for publication are nothing but advertising puffs, and frequently contain statements which are untruthful. The importunities of the great army of legitimate and illegitimate agents and bureau which seek publicity for every conceivable interest and thing have all but exhausted the patience of editors and publishers.

Within their proper spheres publicists have been important factors in the spread of intelligence, and will continue to form a useful adjunct to newspaper making. Like every class of human beings engaged in the promotion of activities they have been governed by different moral and ethical standards. An honest and truthful press agent, like his prototype in other lines of endeavor, has done much to enlighten the public on many matters and subjects of interest. The untruthful and dishonest brother in the profession has brought discredit upon the calling and made it increasingly difficult for the public to differentiate between the legitimate and proper and the illegitimate and improper in publicity.

The publishers to whom both classes address their appeals have often been pitted to the test to discern between the deserving and undeserving. Always alert to secure matter that will be informative and have news value to their readers, publishers have opened their columns freely for publicity of all purposes. The multiplicity of agencies and bureaus during the past few years, coupled with the increasing growth of thinly disguised advertising schemes, has prompted publishers, as a measure of self-defense, to curtail the privileges which heretofore they have granted with a free hand.

The free notice of the advertising agent is free advertising in the raw state and the press matter of most of the press agents in advertising under guise of news. The former should be denied and the latter regulated to reason. When that is done the waste basket will have most of it.

GARBAGE COLLECTION.

The present plan of garbage collection in the city has not been in operation long enough to determine its success or failure. It is hoped, however, that it will prove more effective than the former method. Of this there is reasonable doubt, a statement that is in nowise intended to reflect on the present management. The defect lies with the system.

Several towns in this and other states have tried the private contract method and have found it unsatisfactory. Great difficulty has been experienced in securing systematic and thorough collections, but most of the trouble of all is the indifference, or the positive refusal, of householders to cooperate in the work. This is especially true in towns where the plan provides for a monthly charge for the service. The feeling is becoming general that municipalities should collect and remove the garbage without direct charge to the householders, just as the streets are cleaned and lighted at public expense.

A number of municipalities are adopting the latter plan. McKeesport, in case of war, the Conneltsville coke region could furnish an abundance of nitrate for making explosives, with an exception for fertilizing purposes. Street. Any old thing you want, ask us for it. If we haven't got it in stock we'll make it for you in a couple of jiffies. That's the way to get a bit and watch one smoke.

Where Clogs Stand. Where Clogs Stand. But few men sent to Congress have in so short a time attracted the attention and gained the prominence that Mr. Crago has during the time he has been a member of that body.

Circus Disasters. Fairmount West Virginia. Gallant youths, dressed up in their Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes and accompanied by their sweethearts were conspicuous by their numbers. They bought balloons, peanuts, pop corn, ice cream cones and jammed with an utter disregard for expense, while the circus waltzers reaped a rich harvest.

daily from private families, and recommends taxation as a means to provide a fund for that purpose. It is found to be too expensive when applied to the whole borough. It is suggested that, "then there should be an ordinance enacted to compel people who are negligent in this respect to see that all objectionable material is removed from back yards at the expense of the people who permit such material to accumulate."

Connellsville is willing to give its new garbage removal plan a fair trial, and the people ought to endeavor in an effort to prove its effectiveness. Whether the present or a substitute plan, such as other cities have adopted, is eventually employed, neither will operate automatically or without a rigid enforcement of the ordinance designed to regulate the matter, supported by a helpful interest on part of the citizens.

"The Courier plays no favorites." This declaration was made with reference to the editorial and it still stands. The News attempts to apply it to the West Penn situation and wants to know why the "Courier didn't enlarge" upon the News' suppression of the news. The "Courier never enlarges" on the facts. It played no favorites in the West Penn matter, but spoke its opinions roundly. It made bold to doubt the wisdom of the injunction, but the injunction having been enacted it did not "enlarge" further on the question, but contented itself with giving its readers the facts about the hearing. And finally, we suspect that we have "enlarged" upon this topic to more than the satisfaction of our readers. Therefore, it is a good place to "close" it.

The News says The Courier is a hypocrite, but it succeeds in putting the lie on itself.

The elaborate pamphlet report of the city finances of 1915 is being distributed at the house of the editors. The latter did not manifest enough interest to call at the City Hall and get copies and in order to get rid of the printed matter it has been distributed in this manner. Perhaps it would be better to publish the annual report of receipts and expenditures in the newspaper without such a wealth of confusing detail.

The Courier conveys its good wishes to the R. & O. and The News says we are "always knocking." The hammer is in the other hand.

Senator Warren C. Harding of Ohio, temporary chairman of the Republican National Convention, notwithstanding he is staunchly for Theodore T. Burton, is expected to back James A. Garfield over a man nominating John Sherman that the convention nominated him as a compromise.

The Roosevelt boom has reached Chicago backed by the House of Morgan.

Martin Grove Brumbaugh is not the favorite son of Pennsylvania, but he seems to be something of a boss on Capitol Hill. It is said that a number of employes in doubt about their jobs because they were independent in their voting. The Governor believes in independent voting and when it is a vote against the opposition.

The Allegheny proposition to revive the debtors' jail induces retrospection.

The bathing season is on at Atlantic City, but the South Conneltsville beach has not opened yet. When it does there will be a wealth of style to select from.

Peace rumors persist. The wish is probably father to the thought.

Colonel Grago believes in preparedness. He always has a speech on this, and he is in frequent demand as an orator. The voters of Pennsylvania are getting a speaking acquaintance with him, and they expressed it at the primary.

Shoes will be higher this fall. If lovely women ought to economize on the skirt.

Connellsville is in a fair way to break up the habit of running away with motor cars. The punishment of a few jail-riders of this character will be sufficient.

The Western Pennsylvania members of Congress are a unit in the opinion that the Government armor plate plant is a government error. They are uniformly Republican in their politics, too.

President Wilson's protest against the carbonless manner in which mail of neutral nations is treated by the allies is very justified and proper. It is greatly lacking in the reckless manner in which he handled the Berlin correspondence.

Interest on Conneltsville's school bonds is not due until December, but it starts right away.

About this time in the year one can never be sure that the old pennance train runs on the old time.

Walter, the New York dentist who poisoned his father-in-law, has been found guilty. He boasted that he was a great man and the jury took him at his word.

Mayor Smith wants to be Harmony Road of Philadelphia, but some of the older and bigger politicians think this is just a little small for the job. The Philadelphia Republicans don't need any bosses this fall. It is every Republican's duty to vote the Republican ticket.

Having fought out their differences at the primary, the Westmoreland Republicans are lining up for the district. It is time to close the ranks.

The Human Fly got too big on the occasion of his second visit.

The chain gang is a moral and material improvement over the outdoor.

The anti-smoking ordinance is not dead. Don't expectorate on the sidewalk if you expect to rate as a good citizen. The sentiment is old but timely.

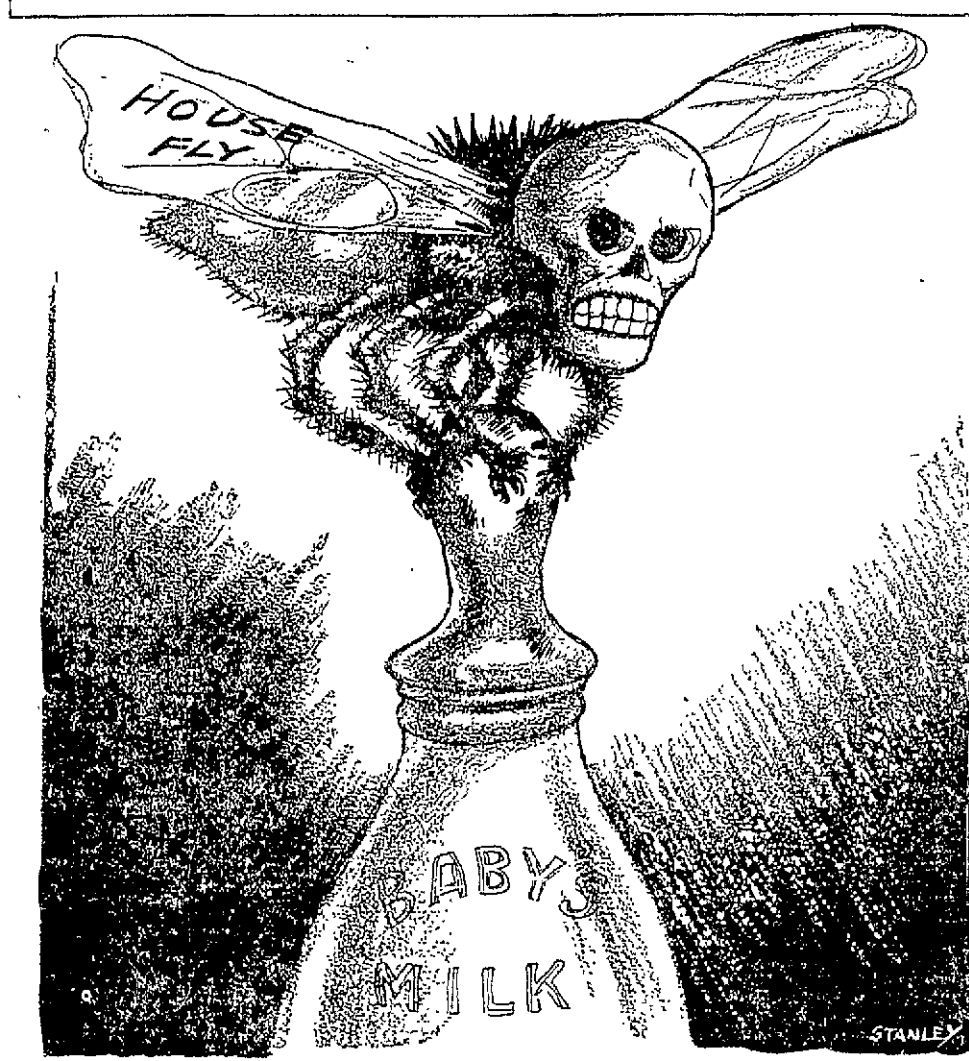

It was a great day in Conneltsville yesterday. The Police of the coke region celebrated their Fourth of July. Their parade was important, but most of the men looked like American citizens, or people who ought to be.

The City Square will as usual lead the City Beautiful movement.

The Greensburg tale of Hannah the Hugger is touching.

The Mothers Pension Board of Fayette county has more money for distribution this year, but it will not have to advertise for claimants.

MORE DEADLY THAN BULLETS

The Retort Courteous

The Uniontown Standard declares that it is supporting Woodrow Wilson for re-election as a labor of love. Not to mention Ross Stilwell's grip on the postoffice and things.

The Meyersdale Republican, reminded that we have yielded to Germany and to England, and are about to yield to Japan on immigration restrictions, is convinced that yielding has become a habit with the Wilson administration, but takes comfort in the thought that it will presently yield to a Republican administration.

The Menhaden Independent, out of an abundance of experience, declares that good fishing grounds are always recognized by the quantity of corks found in the neighborhood, none of which show any signs of having been attached to fish lines. Good bait indicates good fishing.

The McKeesport News finds that many people will go to the theatre if they can get a back seat and others will take the cars if they can take up a whole seat.

The Latrobe Advance holds this truth to be self-evident, that if every citizen of a community will close their eyes to the idea that fire is something to be feared, constantly, and something that can only be kept at bay through constant vigilance, the town's fire losses will be kept down.

Extensive vigilance is cheaper than frequent re-building.

Iowa

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

Iowa is a large and happy cornfield, dotted with the red-tiled houses and half-ton hogs which are exchanged by their owners, when ripe, for automobiles and pianos. The field is bounded on the east and west by the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, but hard work is used on the north and south. The crop of corn is the pride of the population and the editorial pages and market reports in the daily papers with the grain are noted.

Iowa has no romance in its story. Its history could not be dramatized, any of its heroes would not win any success. About seventy-four years ago people began going into Iowa from Illinois to raise crops and they have caught between the two are the affairs and droppings of an unusually severe winter.

Men Picked for Important Places in Republican Convention

A tentative program arranged for the Republican national convention provided for the election as permanent chairman of Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, Senator Borah of Idaho, Governor Whitman of New York or ex-Governor Mulvey of Missouri. Later the choice seemed to narrow down to Senator Borah, with Senator Lodge as chairman of the committee on resolutions, which drafts the platform, and Governor Whitman designated to place the name of Justice Hughes in nomination before the convention. The designations of Senator Lodge and Governor Whitman have not been changed. It is said, but Senator Borah may go on the committee on resolutions and become Mr. Lodge's principal lieutenant on the floor of the convention. The name of Governor Whitman was suggested for the vice-presidency should the nomination for the presidency go to a western man, but Governor Whitman disapproved such reports, as he is an open and strong advocate of Justice Hughes. Nos. 1 and 4, exterior and interior, Republican National Convention in Coliseum, Chicago, No. 2, Senator Borah; No. 3, Senator Lodge; No. 5, Governor Whitman.

NEXT YEAR'S REQUIREMENTS

Being Planned Upon By Some Buyers of Steel; Labor a Big Factor.

Confidence in the continuation of prosperity for at least another year is shown by the action of some of the largest buyers of steel plates in the country, who have approached representatives of mills in the hope of making contracts for requirements through all of next year, says The Iron Trade Review. One buyer would like to contract for 24,000 tons and another for 15,000 tons. Mills are not willing, however, to make contracts at the present time for delivery so far in the future.

The Lukens Iron & Steel Company is operating under such tremendous demand that its own steel production is not sufficient to meet requirements of its rolling mills and has bought 10,000 tons of billets and slabs of other steelmakers, both in the east and middle west, paying $50, delivered. The labor factor is having an important bearing on the general situation, owing to inefficiency and shortage of employees.

The pig iron market is quiet and in some sections particularly in the south, shows a tendency to sag. Tremendous demands for materials for the belting still find expression in inquiries for very large tonnages of billets, wire products and other forms of steel.

FOREIGN RAILWAY MATERIAL

Appears to Give Better Service Than That Manufactured in U. S.

Foreign railway material, the Bureau of Standards at Washington has announced, after an investigation covering rail accidents in the United States and abroad, appears to perform its duties better than American equipment.

The report shows that derailments in the United States are twenty-six times more numerous for each 1,000 miles of track than in Great Britain; three times as numerous as in Germany, but not so numerous as in Austria-Hungary. In terms of passengers carried, the American and Austrian derailments are about the same, but the American are nearly 600 times the British and twenty-four times the German.

Low accident and derailment figures are shown for France, Russia and Sweden. In France one person is injured in every 2,000,000 transported; in the United States it is 14 persons in 2,000,000.

Rail breakages in France are given as one in 2,000 and in Germany one in 1,250. In the United States one rail in 470 is found defective.

UNUSUAL COMPENSATION CLAIM.

Rockwood Clerk Says Carrying a Typewriter Caused Appendicitis.

One of the most unusual claims yet filed for compensation comes from Rockwood where W. M. G. Day, a clerk of the Rockwood Electric Company, has asked compensation for disability resulting from an attack of appendicitis.

Day claims that while carrying the machine he placed it against his right side, which resulted in the case of appendicitis, necessitating an operation at a Pittsburg hospital.

Sick Headache.

This disease is nearly always caused by a disordered stomach. Correct that and the attacks of sick headache may be avoided. Mrs. A. L. Jucik, East Rochester, N. Y., writes: "I was a victim of sick headache, caused by a badly disordered stomach when I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets three years ago. In a few weeks time I was restored to my former good health." Obtainable everywhere.—Ad.

A Nation-Wide Movement

THE Audit Bureau of Circulations is the result of a nation-wide movement to put circulation on a commodity basis—to secure uniformity and standardization.

It is a purely co-operative organization—not for profit.

Its membership consists of 878 leading Advertisers, Advertising Agents and Publishers of newspapers, magazines, farm, class, trade and technical journals, forming the most powerful and influential organization in America—it is growing all the time.

The A. B. C. is the only organization that audits, analyzes and verifies circulation figures and facts.

It benefits Advertisers by giving them facts instead of claims. It protects the Agency in its judgment of mediums. It puts the Publisher's circulation on a "known value" basis.

The members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations are pledged to buy and sell circulation as a commodity—both as to quality and quantity.

Complete information regarding the service of the Bureau furnished on request. Send for "Standardized Circulation Information" addressing Russell R. Whitman, Managing Director.

GREENE COUNTY IS DEEPLY STIRRED OVER R. R. PROSPECTS

Have Firm Faith That the New Enterprise Will be a Sure Go.

FARMERS GIVE FREE RIGHTS

Of Way and Offer Other Forms of Enfranchisement to Promoters; Standing of the Backers Assure Stability of Undertaking; Work Begins Soon.

The prospect of securing a standard railroad, such as the Wheeling & Eastern Railroad Company plans to build, is stirring the people of Greene as they have not been stirred for a long time. The most lively interest is manifested on every hand and every encouragement is being offered the promoters of the new line.

The residents of Waynesburg and other sections of the county to be traversed by the road are signing petitions, addressed to the new company, giving endorsement to the project and pledging signers to do everything in their power to aid in its completion. Many land owners in both the eastern and western parts of the county are offering free rights of way through their farms and urging their neighbors to do the same.

The promoters of the new enterprise have been working quietly for some months past, divulging their plans to no one until what appeared to them to be the proper time. They anticipated opposition such as has developed in the chartering of the Wheeling & Eastern Railroad Company, build a line from Wheeling to Morgantown, W. Va., and were prepared to meet it. Envoys have been at work on the Wheeling & Eastern location for two months past under the direction of Worthington M. Jacobus of New York, chief engineer.

The personnel of the company backing the new road indicates that it is to be a substantial undertaking. Isaac M. Scott, president of the Wheeling Iron & Steel Company, interested with him are: C. R. Hubbard, former president and now director of the Wheeling Steel & Iron Company; J. J. Hallaway, president of Laclede Steel Company and president of the Bridgeport Bank; B. W. Peterson, president of the Dollars Savings & Trust Company; Edward G. Hackett & Belmont Bankers; Ambrose S. List, president of the City Bank of Wheeling; Alexander Glass, president of the Whitaker-Glasser Company, Wheeling Corrugating Company and Portsmouth Steel Company; E. C. Evans, director of the companies just mentioned; Charles N. Brady, chairman of the board of directors, and Joseph C. Brady, president, of the Hackett-Glasser Company; H. H. Ogden, owner of the Wheeling Intelligencer and Wheeling Evening News; and William F. Siffel, manufacturer of radios, all of Wheeling.

An application will be made to the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania on July 1 for a certificate of public convenience, evidencing the approval of the commission of the incorporation of the Wheeling & Eastern Railroad Company of Pennsylvania. The route of the road, as described in the articles of incorporation, is as follows: "Beginning at a point at or near the Pennsylvania state line in Greene county, near Morgantown, W. Va., and thence by the most practicable route to a point at or near McConn's Ferry, in Greene county." Charles McConne of Wheeling and Ralph J. Baker, of Morgantown, are solicitors of the company.

F. A. Laxman, railroad editor of the Pittsburgh Dispatch characterizes the proposed new road as "The most ambitious railroad project of recent years and one of the most important in respect of new construction and potentialities, undertaken anywhere in the country during the past decade."

"The Wheeling & Eastern railroad," this writer adds, "is a project in which neither the Western Maryland railroad nor the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad has the remotest interest except in the case of the latter, as a potential connection in the near future, and in that of the former similarly at a time far in the future. It was projected and will be built by interests closely identified with the Wheeling Steel & Iron company, with which it will be operated as a subsidiary, in fact, since the primary purpose of its construction will be to bring the steel plants of the steel company, located in Fayette county, into direct connection with its Wheeling plants."

"The steel company's coke plant is located near Dam No. 6 on the Monongahela River, 20 miles west of Conneltsville, from which its product now must be hauled to Pittsburgh and thence to Wheeling, a route more than double the length of the one projected. So, unlike most railway projects, the purpose of its inauguration is fulfilled at the outset, and whatever collateral traffic shall be developed with the opening of a new territory will be profitable by just so much. That this will be considerable is assured, for apart entirely from anything else, the new road will be underlaid, every foot of its extent, by coal.

"That the connection at the home terminals with the Wheeling & Lake Erie will prove profitable to the projected line from the outset is certain, and that the construction of the 20-mile link necessary to effect a connection with the Western Maryland at Conneltsville would be beneficial to it is equally so, although more so to the latter; hence it will devolve upon the interests in control of the Eastern property to determine whether it shall be undertaken. It is virtually assured that construction of the Wheeling & Eastern will be begun during the coming summer."

The completion of the Wheeling & Eastern enterprise is continuing its surveys and making preparations to proceed with the work. President A. J. Morgan says that the reports that the Wheeling Coal Railroad Company is not a bonafide project is an injustice.

"The road will be built," declared Mr. Morgan, "no matter what the Wheeling & Eastern people do. No time will be lost, either, and the survey work now in progress will soon be finished, and the right of way gotten as rapidly as possible, after which the work of construction will rapidly follow."

MILLIONS TO FARM LABOR

Large Annual Expenditure for Male Help.

HARRISBURG, May 29.—Farmers of Pennsylvania are estimated to pay about $10,000,000 a year for male help about the farms by the Bureau of Statistics of the State Department of Agriculture which has received reports from every county. The total value of the agricultural produce of the Keystone State is given as $190,000,000 so that one-tenth of the income is paid in wages to men and boys.

The total payments for male help are $29,957,023, and the estimated average payment by each farmer for such help is $176. The estimated payment for female help is $2,572,000 per year.

Lebanon county with its 10,000 farmers pays out annually $3,629,725, while Bucks county ranks second with an outlay of $2,157,500 and Chester third with $2,133,080. Six other counties pay out over $1,000,000 as follows: Allegheny, $1,176,700; Berks, $1,577,310; Franklin, $1,096,500; Montgomery, $1,570,191; Westmoreland, $1,036,256; York, $1,497,120.

CANDIDATES FILE ACCOUNTS

Senator G. T. Oliver and Others Render Election Expenses.

HARRISBURG, May 29.—Expense accounts filed at the State Capitol include the following:

Senator George T. Oliver, candidate for Republican delegate-at-large, expended $2,852, as follows: $2,000 to straight Republican ticket committee; $750 for campaign of W. H. Coleman; $50 for campaign of Representatives J. W. Vickerman and Nelson McVicar; Allegheny; $50 to Pennsylvania Local Option Committee and $2 for advertising.

L. V. Babcock and D. L. Gillespie, candidates for Republican delegates-at-large, $2,000 and $1,000, respectively, to straight Republican ticket committee, and Congressman M. M. Garland, $187.

POLICE DOCKET FILLED

Entrant of an Arrest Fills Every Sheet in Book at City Hall.

For the first time in the history of Conneltsville the police docket has been filled four days before the month is out. The docket now in use contains 100 pages with space for an entry on each side, thus holding the names and commitments of 200 prisoners. In some cases more than one prisoner has been entered on the same sheet, making over 250 arrests for May already.

Never before has the docket been filled, and it is usually only partially used when the month ends. The number of arrests for May will probably hold the record for the year.

Consideration Was $3,500. By the deed conveying the property of Joseph E. Gray on East Fairview avenue to Stanton B. Dull, entered for record on Saturday, the consideration is shown to be $3,500.

DAWSON KNIGHTS OF MALTA ARE GUESTS OF CUMBERLAND

Delegation Attends an Initiation in the Queen City; Royally Entertained.

Omar No. 330, Dawson Commandery, Knights of Malta, was well represented at a recent initiation into the mysteries of the Red Cross, held at Cumberland, Star of the East Commandery No. 461 of Cumberland having charge of the initiation, assisted by No. 4 Victor Commandery of Frostburg, Md. Forty-five members took the initiation degree of the Red Cross, among which were seven members of the Dawson Commandery, as follows: Stanley Moug, Henry Brown, G. H. Urmach, J. F. Wingrove, Roy Levergood, William J. Sheppard and D. D. Urmach.

The Dawson candidates were escorted by Sir Knight Frank Showalter, Sir Knight S. J. Miller, Sir Knight G. W. Mawhinney. The Dawson members were met at the train at Cumberland by a committee of the Star of the East Commandery by the following committee: Sir Knights G. H. Porter, J. C. Waring, J. M. Harris, T. A. Jones and C. J. Sheppard.

One hundred and sixty attended the initiation exercises. Sir Knights J. F. Wingrove, Henry Brown and S. J. Miller delivered addresses which were well received, while the closing speech was made by Sir Knight Frank Showalter, which made a hit with the guests and drew rounds of applause. After the initiation the guests held a banquet at the Balmores Dairy lunch where a dinner was served "to the queen's taste." The Dawson boys speak in highest praise for the courteous treatment shown them while in the Queen City.

LOCAL OPTION JOILED

Legislative Returns Show Dry Forces Much Weakened.

PHILADELPHIA, May 29.—Practically complete returns from the recent legislative fights throughout the state show that local option received a wallop at the recent primary election. The majority against the enactment of such legislation will be greater in the next than in any of the last three general assemblies, notwithstanding the well-organized plans of the local option leaders and the fact that the state administration was behind the movement. That the project was so decisively beaten under such favorable circumstances may lessen the effect of this issue in state politics for a few years.

From the round-up of successful assembly candidates in the primary election it appears certain that the local option forces lost at least 20 votes in the House of Representatives. Counties and districts that were counted upon confidently by the leaders of this movement have sent in most discouraging reports. Washington county, for instance, that was looked to for the nomination of three "dry" legislators on the Republican ticket, appears to have chosen three "wets." Equally discouraging in the "dry" leaders are reports from Westmoreland and other western counties, including Allegheny, where a gala over the "dry" vote in the 1915 Assembly was expected.

LECTURES POPULAR

Talks by Father Hayes Well Attended at Danbar.

The first week of a very successful mission came to a close last evening in St. Aloysius Church at Danbar. The church was crowded by devout parishioners who had been attending the services of the mission. The first week was concluded last evening when Father Hayes delivered a sermon on Heaven and imparted the benediction of Pope Benedict XV.

This evening at 8 o'clock the first of a series of lectures on the doctrine of Christianity will be delivered. The subject tonight will be "Marriage and Divorce." All persons interested in religion are invited to attend this course of lectures.

FERRY POLICE

PERRY POLICE, May 29.—Miss Grace Hough of Banning was calling on friends and attending the alumni banquet on Saturday evening.

HISTORIC FLAG INCIDENTS

BATTLE FLAG DAY

SOME thirty-five years ago the gold-domed marble State Capitol at Hartford, Conn., illustrated above, which stands so impressively upon an eminence in Bunnell Park in that city, was completed.

A day was set aside for transferring the tattered, war-scarred battle flags from the state arsenal to the new Capitol, where they now repose in state, revered and honored by hundreds of visitors who view them daily. The event of their transference went forward with great military pomp and honor. And the day was called.

BATTLE FLAG DAY

Each tattered banner was carried in the procession at the head of the living remnant of the original regiment that bore it to the front through the bitterly fought battles of the Civil War. And the entire city was one wind-blown, fluttering mass of the Red and White and Blue. It was a day of wild enthusiasm. Patriotism ran riot. The sight of these battle-scarred banners made men to cheer and throw hats into the air; women screamed and old veterans' cheeks ran wet with tears in the ecstasy of their patriotism.

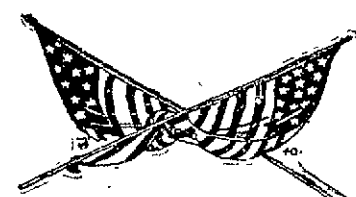

And who shall say that American patriotism is dead? OCCASION only is required to make it burst forth a strong, healthy expression of sympathy with the honored principles in which this Republic stands founded.

There are many occasions that should be Flag Days with every true American citizen. Every National, State and Civic Holiday is a day upon which to show your patriotism and SHOW THE FLAG. It will keep alive the reverence for the Stars and Banner and teach the young to honor it as well.

"Easily enough, if we can spare the hands, by cutting away the ice, where it is frozen to the piles, so that it won't lift them with it. The trouble is to get men enough. You see, this ice is nine feet thick now. I've set every man to work with axes and chisels and steam points, and I came up to telephone Slater for more help. We'll have to work fast night and day."

"There's nobody left in Omar," Eliza said quickly.

"I know. Tom's going to gather all the men at Cortez and hope and wish them out here. Our task is to keep the ice cut away until help arrives."

"I suppose it's too late in the season to repair any serious damage."

"Exactly. If you care to go back with me you can see what we're doing."

As they set off for the bridge side Murray looked down at Eliza, smiling and looking at him with some thing of affectionate appreciation in his eyes, and said humbly: "It was careless of me not to see what you have been doing for me all this time. My only excuse is that I've been driven half mad with other things. I haven't time to think of myself."

"All householders have a thousand tasks," laughed Eliza.

All that day Eliza watched the unequal struggle, and in the evening Dan brought her reports that were far from reassuring. The relentless movement showed no sign of ceasing. When she retired that night she sought ease from her anxiety in a prayer that was half a petition for O'Neil's success and half an exceedingly full and frank confession of her love for him. Out side, beneath the glare of torches and hastily strung incandescents, a weary army toiled stubbornly, digging, gouging, chopping at the foot of the towering wall of ice which stretched across the Salmon. In the north the aurora borealis played brilliantly as if to light a council of the gods.

CHAPTER XXII.

Final Preparations.

ON the following day Happy Tom arrived with the first of help.

"I got the last mule's load I could find," he explained as he warmed himself at O'Neil's stove.

"Did you go to Homer?"

"I did, and I saw the splavvus himself."

"Gordon?"

"He's worse than we thought." Tom tapped his shivering forehead significantly. "Lost to let."

"What's happened?"

"Nothing but echoes in his dome. The town's as empty as his bonnet, too, and the streets are full of snow. It's a sight!"

"Tell me about Mrs. Gordon."

"She's quite a person," said Slater slowly. "She surprised me. She's there, alone with him and a watchman. She does all the work, even to lunching in the wood and coal—she's too busy to help, but she won't leave him. She told me that Dan and Natalie wanted her to come over here, but she couldn't bring herself to do it or let them assist in any way. Gordon stands all his time at his desk, promoting, writing ads, and prospectuses. He's got a grand scheme. He's found that 'Hypo Consolidated' is full of rich ore, but the trouble is in getting it out, so he's working on a new process of extraction. It's a wonderful process—you'd never guess what it is. He smokes it out! He says all he needs is plenty of smoke. That bothered him until he hit on the idea of burning feathers. Now he's planning to raise Uncle, because they're got so much down. Isn't that the limit? She'll have to fit him into a padded cell sooner or later."

"Poor devil!" said O'Neil. "I'm sorry. He had an unusual mind."

Slater smiled. "I think it's pretty soft for him myself. He's made better than a stand-off—he lost his memory, but he saved his skin. He's funny how some men can't fall. If they slip on a banana peel somebody shows a caution under 'em before they light. I never got the best of anything. If I dropped asleep in church my wife would divorce me and I'd go to the electric chair. Gordon robs widows and orphans right and left, then ends up with a loving woman to take care of him in his old age. Why, if I've robbed a blind puppy of a biscuit I'd leave a thumb print on his ear or the dog's mother would turn out to be a bloodhound. Anyhow, I'd spend my declining years nestled up to a rock pile with a mallet in my mitt and a low browed gentleman scowling at me from the top of a wall. He'd lean on his shotgun and say: 'Turkey you, Fat-tur. It's getting late, and there's a lot of oakum to pick.' It just goes to show that some of us are born behind the game and never get even, while others, like Gordon, quit winner, no matter how much they lose."

Having relieved himself of this fervid homily, Happy Tom unrolled a package of gum and thrust three sticks into his mouth. "Speaking of bad luck," he continued, "when are you going to get married, Murray?"

"Why—never! It isn't the same kind of proposition as building a bridge, you know. There's a little matter of youth and good looks that counts considerably in the marriage business. No woman would have an old chap like me."

Slater took a mournful inventory of his chief's person, then said doubtfully: "You might put it over, Murray. I ain't strictly handsome myself, but I did."

As O'Neil slipped into his fur coat, after the fat man had slouched off, he caught sight of himself in the glass of his bureau and paused. He leaned forward and studied the careworn countenance that peered forth at him, then shook his head. He saw that the hair was growing grayer, that the face was very plain, and—yes, unquestionably, it was no longer youthful. Of course he didn't feel old, but the evidence that he was so admitted of a disproof, and it was evidence of a sort which no woman could disregard.

For a week the ice rose slowly, a foot a day, and in spite of the greatest watchfulness it took the false work with it here and there. But concentrated effort at the critical points saved the structure from serious injury. Then the jam in front of Jackson glacier went out, at least in part, and the ice began to fall. Down it settled smoothly, swiftly, until it rested once more upon the shores. It was still as firm as in midwinter and showed no sign of breaking; nor had it moved downstream a hair's breadth. O'Neil gathered his forces for the final onslaught.

On April 5 the last of the steel for span No. 1 reached the front, and erection was begun. The men fell to with a vim and an enthusiasm impossible to describe. With incredible rapidity the heavy sections were laid in place. The riveters began their marvellous song, riveting these bent towers rear smoothly on its track, and under it grew a webwork of metal, braced and reinforced to withstand, in addition to ordinary strains, the pressure of a hundred miles an hour wind. To those who looked on the structure appeared to build itself, like some dream edifice. It seemed a miracle that human hands could work that stubborn metal so swiftly and with so little effort. But every piece had been cut and fitted carefully, then checked and placed where it was necessary.

Now that winter had broken spring came with a rush. The snows began to shrink and the drifts to settle. The air grew balmy with every day; the drip from eaves was answered by the gurgling laughter of hidden waters. Here and there the boldest mountain slides began to show, and the tops of alder thickets thrust themselves into sight. Where wood or metal caught the sun rays the snow retreated. Pools of ice water began to form at noon.

The days were long, too, and no frozen winds charged out of the north. As the daylight lengthened so did the working hours of the toilers.

On April 18 the span was completed. In thirteen days Mallon's crew had laid 400 feet of the heaviest steel ever used in a bridge of this type. But there was no halt. The material for the second section had been assembled meanwhile, and the traveler began to swing it into place.

The day was unclouded. The clash of riveters, the creak and rattle of hoists, the shouts of men, mingled in a persistent, ear-splitting clamor, and foot by foot the girders reached out toward the second monolith which rose from the river bed. The well adjusted human machine was running smoothly. Every man knew his place and the duties that went with it; the hands of each worker were capable and skilled. But now the hillside was growing bare, the rills gashed the sloping snow fields, the upper gullies began to rumble to avalanches—forebodings of the process that would strip the earth of snow and ice and free the river in all its fury. In six days 300 feet more of steel had been bolted fast to the complete section, and span No. 2 was in place. But the surface of the Salmon was no longer white and pure, it was dirty and discolored now, for the debris which had collected during the past winter was exposing itself. The key covering was partially inundated also. Shallow ponds formed upon it and were rippled by the south breeze. Running waters on every side sang a menace to the workers.

Then progress ceased abruptly. It became known that a part of the material for the third span had gone astray in its long journey across the continent. There had been a delay at the St. George mills, then a blockade in the St. George river, and finally, at the end of the cable straining every nerve to have the shipment rushed through, Mallon brooded over his uncompleted work; Parker studied the dripping hills and measured the melting snows. He still smiled, but he showed his anxiety in a constant nervous unrest, and he could not sleep.

At length news came that Johnny Brennan had the steel aboard his ship and had sailed. A record run was predicted, but meanwhile the south wind brought havoc on his breath. The sun shone hotly into the valley of the Salmon, and instead of warmth it brought a chill to the hearts of those who watched and waited.

Two long, idle days crawled by. Winter no longer gave battle; she was routed and in her mad retreat she threatened to overwhelm O'Neil's fortresses.

On May 6 the needed bridge members were assembled, and the erection of span 3 began. The original plan had been to build this section on the cantilever principle, so as to gain independence of the river ice, but to do so would have meant slow work and much delay—an expenditure of time which the terms of the option made impossible. Arrangements had been made, therefore, to lay it on false work, as the other spans had been laid, risking everything upon the weather.

As a matter of precaution the southern half of the span was connected to the completed portion, but before the connection could be fully made the remainder of the jam in front of Jackson glacier, which had caused so much trouble heretofore, went out suddenly, and the river ice moved downstream about a foot, carrying with it the whole intricate system of supporting timbers beneath the uncompleted span. Hasty measurements showed that the north end of the steel then on the false work was thirteen inches out of line.

It was Mr. Blaine who brought the tidings of this calamity to Eliza Appleton. From his evident anxiety she gathered that the matter was of graver consequence than she could well understand.

"Thirteen inches in 1,500 feet can't amount to much," she said vaguely.

Blaine smiled in spite of himself. "You don't understand. It's as bad as the first foot, for the work can go on only everything is in perfect alignment. That whole forest of piles must be straightened."

"Impossible!" she gasped. "Why, there are thousands of them."

He shook his head, still smiling doubtfully. "Nothing is impossible to Mallon and Parker. They've begun clearing away the ice on the upstream side and driving new anchor piles above. They're going to tie tracks to them and yank the whole thing upstream. I never heard of such a thing, but there's no time to do anything else."

He cast a worried look at the smiling girl. "I wonder what will happen next. This is getting on my nerves."

Out on the river swift work was going on. Steam from every available boiler was carried across the ice in feed pipes, the night shift had been roused from sleep, and every available man was busied in relieving the pressure. The riveters hammered long and hard into the river bed above the pinned point, hydraulic jacks were put in place, and steel cables were run to drum and pulley. The men worked sometimes knee deep in ice water, but they did not walk; they ran. In an incredibly short time the preparations were completed, a strain was put upon the tackle, and when night came the massive false work had been pulled back into line, and the traveler was once more swinging steel into place. It was a magnificent feat, yet not one of those concerned in it felt cool or confident that the work had not been done in vain, for the time was growing terribly short, and although the ice seemed solid, it was rotting fast.

After the southern half of the span had been completed the warmth increased rapidly. Therefore the steel crew lengthened its hours. The men worked from 7 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night.

On the 13th, without warning of any sort, Garfield glacier began moving forward. It halted inactive even during the midwinter thaw which had started its smaller brother, but that warm spell had evidently had its effect upon it, for now he started on his journey of life and awoke. He stirred gradually at first and without sound, as if bent upon surprising the interlopers; then his speed increased. As the glacier advanced it thrust the nine foot blanket of lake ice ahead of it, and this in turn crowded the river ice down upon the bridge. The movement at the camp site on the first day was only two inches, but that was sufficiently serious.

The onset of Garfield at this time was, of course, unexpected, for no forward motion had ever been reported prior to the spring breakup. The action of the ice heretofore had been alternating, but now consternation spread. A panic swept the ranks of the builders, for this was no short lived phenomenon. This was the annual march of the glacier front, which promised to continue indefinitely. A tremendous cutting edge, nine feet in thickness, like the blade of a carpenter's plane, was being driven against the bridge by an irresistible force.

Once again the endless thawing and chopping and gouging of ice began, but the more rapidly the encroaching edge was cut away the more swiftly did it bear down. The huge mass began to rumble; it "creaked," it split, it detonated, and, having finally loosened itself from its bed, it acquired increased momentum. As the men with chisels and steampoints became exhausted others took their places, but the structural gang clung to its perch above, augmenting the din of riveters and the grunting of blocks and tackle. Among the able-bodied men sleep now was out of the question, for the ice gained in spite of every effort. It was too late to remove the steel in the uncompleted span to a place of safety, for that would have required more time than to bridge the remaining gap.

Piling began to buckle and bend before that irresistible push. The whole nicely balanced mass of metal was in danger of being unsent. Mallon cursed the heavens in a black fury; Parker smiled through white lips; O'Neil ground his teeth and spurred his men on.

This feverish haste brought its penalty. On the evening of the 14th, when the span was more than three-quarters finished, a lower chord section could as it was lifted, and two leading beams at the top of the traveler snapped.

On that day victory had been in sight. The driving of the last bolt had been but a question of hours, a race with the sliding ice. But with the hoisting apparatus out of use work halted. Swiftly, desperately, without loss of a moment's time, repairs began. No regrets were voiced, no effort was made to place the blame, for that would have caused delay, and every minute counted. Eleven hours later the broken beams were replaced and erection had recommenced.

But now for those above there was danger to life and limb. During the pause the ice had gained, and no effort could relieve the false work of its strain. All knew that if it gave way the workers would be caught in a chaos of collapsing wood and steel.

From the morning of May 14 until midnight of the 15th the workmen clung to their tasks. They dropped their tools and ran to their meals; they gulped their food and fled back to their posts. The weaker ones gave out and staggered away, cursed and taunted by their companions. They were rough fellows and in their deep threatened profanity was a prayer.

At midnight of the 15th the last rivet was driven, but the ice had gained to such an extent that the lower chord was buckled down stream about eight inches, and the distance was growing steadily. Quickly the traveler was shifted to the false work beyond the pier, and the man under Mallon's direction fell to splitting out the blocking.

As the supports were chopped away the mass began to crush the last few wedges; there was a great snapping and rending of wood, and some one strained to the breaking point, shouted "Look out! There she goes!"

A cry of terror arose. The men fled, trampling one another in their panic. But Mallon charged them like a wild man, firing curses and orders at them until they halted. The remaining supports were rammed; the 1,500 tons of metal settled into place and rested securely on its foundations.

O'Neil was the last man ashore. As he walked the completed span from pier 3 the burlesque of piling beneath him was bending and leaning, but he issued no orders to remove it, for the river was doing that. In the general haste pile drivers, hoists, boilers and various odds and ends of machinery and material had been left where they stood. They were being inundated now. Many of them were all but submerged. There was no possibility of saving them at present, for the men were half dead from exhaustion.

As he inched up the muddy, uneven street to his quarters Murray felt his fatigue like a heavy burden, for he had been sixty hours without sleep. He saw Slater and Appleton and the rest of his "boys," he saw Natalie and Eliza, but he was too tired to speak to them or to grasp what they said. He heard the workmen choosing Mallon and Parker and himself. It was very foolish, he thought, to cheer, since the river had so nearly triumphed and the final test was yet to come.

He fell upon his bed clothed as he was. An hour later the false work beneath span 3 collapsed.

Although the bridge was not yet finished, the most critical point of its construction had been passed, for the fourth and final portion would be built over shallow water, and no great difficulties were to be expected even though the ice went out before the work was finished. But Murray had made his promise and his boast to complete the structure within a stated time, and he was determined to live up to the very letter of his agreement with the trust. As to the result of the breakup he had no fear whatever.

For once nature aided him. She seemed to smile as if in approval of his steadfastness. The movement of the channel ice became irregular, spasmodic, but it remained firm until the last spring had been put in place.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Eliza's Feelings Change.

ELIZA's dramatic struggle Eliza Appleton had watched every place with intensest interest, but when at last she knew that the battle was won she experienced a peculiar revulsion of feeling. So long as O'Neil had been working against odds, with the prospect of ruin and failure forever imminent, she had felt an almost painful sympathy, but now that he had conquered she felt timid about congratulating him. He was no longer to be pitied and helped. He had attained the goal and the fame he longed for. His success would inevitably take him out of her life. She was very sorry that he needed her no longer.

She did not watch the last bridge member swung, but went to her room and tried to face the future. Spring was here; her book was finished; there was the need to take up her life again.

She was surprised when Murray came to find her.

"I missed you, Eliza," he said. "The others are all down at the river bank. I want you to congratulate me."

She saw, with a jealous twinge, that exultation over his victory had overcome his weariness, that his face was alight with a fire she never before seen. He seemed young, vigorous and masterful once more.

"Of course," he went on, "the credit belongs to Parker, who worked the bridge out in such detail—he's marvelous—and to Mallon, who actually built it, but I helped a little. Promise to me means promise to them."

"It is all over now, isn't it?"

"Practically. Blaine has called New York that we've won. Strictly speaking, we haven't as yet, for there's still the breakup to face. But the bridge will come through it without a scratch. The ice may go out any minute now, and after that I can rest." He smiled at her gladly. "It will feel good to get rid of all this responsibility, won't it? I think you've suffered under it as much as I have."

A little wistfully she answered: "You're going to realize that dream you told me about the day of the storm, Kyah. You have conquered this great country—as you dreamed."

He acquiesced eagerly, joyfully. "Yes, whitening wheels, a current of traffic, a broad highway of steel—that's the sort of monument I want to leave."

"Some time I'll come back and see it all completed and tell myself that I had a little part in making it."

Rapport-Featherman Co.

"Come back?" he queried. "Why, you're going to stay till we're through, aren't you?"

"Oh, no! I'm going south with the spring fling—on the next boat perhaps."

His face fell; the exultant light gradually faded from his eyes.

"Why, I had no idea! Aren't you happy here?"

She nodded. "But I must try to make good in my work as you have in yours."

He was looking at her sorrowfully, almost as if she had deserted him. "That's too bad, but—suppose you must go. Yes, this is no place for you. I dare say other people need you to bring sunshine and joy to them just as we old fellows do, but—I've never thought about your leaving. It would not be right to ask you to stay here among such people as we are when you have so much ahead of you. Still, it will leave a gap. Yes, it certainly will—leave a gap."

She longed desperately to tell him how willingly she would stay if he only asked her, but the very thought shocked her into a deeper reserve.

"I'm going east to sell my book," she said stiffly. "You've given me the climax of the story in this race with the seasons."

"It's a love story?" he asked.

Eliza flushed. "Yes. It's mostly love."

"You're not at all the girl I thought you were when we first met. You're very different. I'm sure I won't recognize myself as the hero. Who—or what is the girl in the story?"

"Well, she's just the kind of girl that would appeal to a person like you. She's tall and dark and dashing, and, of course, she's remarkably beautiful. She's very feminine, too."

"What's her name?"

Miss Appleton stammered. "Why—I called her Violet—until I could think of a better."

"What's wrong with Violet? You couldn't think of a better name than that. I'm fond of it."

"Oh, it's a good book name, but for real life it's too delicate." Eliza felt with vexation that her face was burning. She was sure he was laughing at her.

"Can't I read the manuscript?" he pleaded.

"Heavens! No! I"—She changed the subject abruptly. "The left word to be called the minute the ice starts to go out. I want to see the last act of the drama."

When O'Neil left her he was vaguely perplexed, for something in her bearing did not seem quite natural. He was, for a moment, at the prospect of losing her. He wondered if fathers suffered thus, or if a lover could be more deeply pained at a parting than he. Somehow he seemed to share the feelings of both.

Early on the following morning Eliza was awakened by a sound of shouting outside her window. She lay half dazed for a moment or two until the significance of the uproar made itself apparent; then she leaped from her bed.

Men were crying:

"There she goes!"

"She's going out!"

Doors were slamming, there was the rustle and swirl of flying feet, and in the next room, Dan was evidently throwing himself into his clothes like a freeman. Eliza called to him, but he did not answer, and the next moment he had fled, upsetting some article of furniture in his haste. Drawing her curtains aside, the girl saw in the brightening dawn men pouring down the street, dressing as they went. They seemed half-demented. They were yelling at one another, but she could not gather from their words whether it was the ice which was moving or the bridge. The bridge! That possibility set her to dressing with trembling fingers, her heart sick with fear. She called to Natalie, but scarcely recognized her own voice.

"I don't know," came the muffled reply to her question. "It sounds like something—terrible. I'm afraid Dan will fall in or get hurt." The confusion in the street was growing. "Eliza! Natalie's voice was tragic.

"What is it, dear?"

"Help me, quick!"

"How?"

"I can't find my other shoe."

But Eliza was sitting on the floor, leaning up her own stout boots, and an instant later she followed her brother, perched by a wall of dismay from the adjoining chamber. Through the chill morning light she hurried, asking many questions, but receiving no coherent reply from the racing men. Then, after endless moments of suspense, she saw with relief that the massive superstructure of the bridge was still standing. Above the shouting she heard another sound, indistinct, but insistent. It filled the air with a whispering movement; it was punctuated at intervals by a dull rumbling and grinding. She found the river bank black with forms, but like a cat she wormed her way through the crowd until the whole panorama lay before her.

The bridge stood as she had seen it on the yesterday—slender, strong, unperched in the simplicity of its splendid outline, but beneath it and as far as her eyes could follow the river she saw, not the solid spread of white to which she had become accustomed, but a moving expanse of floes. At first the winter border slipped past in huge masses, acres in extent, but soon these began to be rent apart; irregular black seams ran through them, opened, closed and threw up ridges of ice shavings as they ground together. The floes were rubbing against the banks, they came sliding over the dry shore like tremendous sheets of cardboard manipulated by unseen hands, and not until their nine foot edges were exposed to view did the mind grasp the appalling significance of their movement. They swept down in phalanxes upon the wedge-like ice breakers which stood guard above the bridge piers, then they halted, separated, and the armored cutting edges sheared through them like blades.

A half mile below, where the Salmon lunged itself headlong against the upper wing of Jackson glacier, the floating ice was checked by the narrowed passageway. There a jam was forming, and as the river bore on and tore at its growing burden a spectacular struggle went on. The sound of it came faintly but impressively to the watchers—a grinding and crushing of bergs, a roar of escaping waters. Fragments were upended, masses were rearing themselves edgewise into the air, were overturning and collapsing. They were edging themselves into every conceivable angle, and the crowding procession from above was adding to the barrier momentarily. As the passageway became blocked the waters rose, the river piled itself up so swiftly that the eye could note its rise along the banks.

But the attention of the crowd was divided between the jam and something far out on the bridge itself. At first glance Eliza did not comprehend; then she heard a man exclaiming:

"He was going out when we got here and now he won't come back."

The girl gasped, for she recognized the distant figure of a man, dwarfed to puny proportions by the bulk of the structure in the mazes of which he stood. The man was O'Neil; he was perched upon one of the girders near the center of the longest span, where he could watch the attack upon the pyramidical ice breakers beneath him.

"He's a fool," said some one at Eliza's back. "That jam is getting bigger."

"He'd better let the bridge take care of itself."

She turned and began to force her way through the press of people between her and the south abutment. She arrived there, disheveled and panting, to find Slater, Mallon and Parker standing in the approach. In front of them extended the long skeleton tunnel into which Murray had gone.

BALTIMORE & OHIO BALL SEASON OPENS WITH THREE GAMES

Six Division Teams Play at Somerset, Fayette Field and S. Connelville.

SHOW A NEED OF PRACTISE

Some Hefty Sluggers Among Material
But Fielding of Teams Is Not Up to the Standard; Bad Condition of Fields Responsible for Many Errors.

In one of the three opening games of the Baltimore & Ohio season the Superintendent's Office defeated the Freight Office, 11-7. The game belonged to the Superintendent's team after the second inning, that nine chasing up two runs in the first and six in the second frame. Two more were added in the third and four in the seventh.

Percy opened the game for the Superintendent's Office and was safe until the sixth inning, when the Freight team began to find his curves and hammered them all over the field, out of reach of his support. Brower was substituted and immediately re-tired the side.

The Superintendent's came back strong in their half of the next inning, batting in four more runs and keeping the lead on their opponents. Moyle, off for the Freight House, was batted out of the box and Stillwagon, playing at first, took the mound. He held the Superintendent's scoreless for the remainder of the game.

Fayette Field had been rolled in preparation for the game but it is still in need of repair for a baseball diamond. The condition of the field was one thing that made the game Saturday uninteresting. A ball that should have come to a fielder would take a bounce in an opposite direction and the runners were safe. The score:

SHOPS DEFEATS YARDS.
The Connelville Shops defeated the Yards on the South Connelville grounds Saturday afternoon, in a good game, 7-4. Both teams were in need of practice as the number of errors made showed, but they were evenly matched, with an interesting game as the result.

Shoatzky, pitching for the Shops, allowed but six hits to the Yards and his team in return got only nine off Raftery. The score:

ROCKWOOD IS DEFEATED.

The Somerset aggregation walked through the Rockwood team for a victory winning 16-7. The Somerset team had the advantage of playing at home on the grounds used for practice during the last week. The Rockwood pitcher was batted out of the box and the substitute could not stop the Dutch slingers.

Somerset will play the Superintendent's Office at Fayette Field next Saturday. This will be the first of the division teams not located here to play on the local grounds. The Superintendent's team won from the Freight Office Saturday and judging from the scores, Somerset and the Superintendent's are about evenly matched.

President Tener Says Bancroft Is Classiest of All Shortstops

PRESIDENT JOHN K. TENER of the National league advances the opinion that the shortstops of his circuit are in a class by themselves. "Individually or collectively the National leaguers are far beyond anything in the American league," said the old league executive. "But that isn't anything really new. The National always has been superior to the American in the shortstopping end of the game. The American league hasn't a man in Bancroft's class as a fielder. He appears to me as one of the greatest shortstops the game has produced. And he hasn't reached the crest yet. Then there are Marquardt of the Braves, Herzog of the Reds, Fletcher of the Giants, Wagner of the Pirates and Olson of the Dodgers." Photo shows Bancroft, the Philadelphia National's sensational shortstop, at the bat.

FROM NOTHING TO MILLIONS

Marks the Amazing Career of a W. & J. Graduate of 1899.

A recent number of Leslie's Weekly gave a very interesting sketch of the remarkable career of George A. Gaston who graduated from Washington & Jefferson college in the class of 1899. With a capital of $1,000 he and two penniless associates formed a company at the outbreak of the European war to do an export business.

Orders were secured from the Allies for motor trucks and other supplies. During the first year over $50,000,000 worth of business was done, the company meantime expanding until it has branch offices in all parts of the world. The New York office occupies one whole floor of a skyscraper and orders are rolling at the rate of over $1,000,000 a week, yielding a profit of about $500,000 per month.

Will Alter Bridge.
To overcome the obstruction to Cox's creek at Rockwood, caused by the Baltimore & Ohio bridge, the abutments and pier will be changed to more nearly conform to the natural course of the stream. The bed of the creek will be dredged to provide a deeper channel. Hereafter the bridge has checked the flow of water during floods, causing considerable damage.
